Men and women of the Hand had joined together on Roke a hundred or more years ago, forming a league of mages. Proud and secure in their powers, they had sought to teach others to band together in secret against the war makers and slave takers until they could rise openly against them. Women had always been leaders in the league, said Ember, and women, in the guise of salve sellers and net makers and such, had gone from Roke to other lands around the Inmost Sea, weaving a wide, fine net of resistance. Even now there were strands and knots of that net left. Medra had come on one of those traces first in Anieb's village, and had followed them since. But they had not led him here. Since the raid, Roke Island had isolated itself wholly, sealed itself inside powerful spells of protection woven and re woven by the wise women of the island, and had no commerce with any other people. "We can't save them," Ember said. "We couldn't save ourselves." He gave a sharp look at his staff, which leaned in the corner behind the door. He put the eggs in. "Nobody can do more than that," said Rose. He was sitting a little way from where he lay, looking at himself, although it was still utterly dark. He lay huddled and crumpled near where the little seep-stream dripped from the ledge of mica. Not far away lay another huddled heap, rotted red silk, long hair, bones. Beyond it the cavern stretched away. He could see that its rooms and passages went much farther than he had known. He saw it with the same uncaring interest with which he saw Tinaral's body and his own body. He felt a mild regret. It was only fair that he should die here with the man he had killed. It was right. Nothing was wrong. But something in him ached, not the sharp body pain, a long ache, lifelong. Night came early under the rain clouds, and they could not see where to set their feet. "But, he said, it must be learned and practiced for its own sake." "Where?" he whispered, and then said the word aloud in the language all things understand that have no other language. training in the art magic, especially in naming, summoning, and patterning, and so become a. But for some decades the kings of Hupun had been in conflict with the high priest and his followers in Awabath, the Holy City, fifty miles from Hupun. The priests of the Twin Gods were in the process of wresting power from the kings and making Awabath not only the religious but the political center of the country. Erreth-Akbe's visit seems to have coincided with the final shift of power from the kings to the priests. King Thoreg received him with honor, but Intathin the High Priest fought with him, defeated or deceived him, and for a time imprisoned him. The deeds and lays that tell of raids by dragons and counterforays by wizards portray the dragons as pitiless as any wild animal, terrifying, unpredictable, yet intelligent, sometimes wiser than the wizards. Though they speak the True Speech, they are endlessly devious. Some of them clearly enjoy battles of wits with wizards, "splitting arguments with a forked tongue." Like human beings, all but the greatest of them conceal their true names. In the lay Hasa's Voyage, the dragons appear as formidable but feeling beings, whose anger at the invading human fleet is justified by their love of their own desolate domain. They address the hero: By that time there were many people of the Hand who knew what was afoot on Roke. Young people came there sent by them. Men and women came to be taught and to teach. Many of these had a hard time getting there, for the spells that hid the island were stronger than ever, making it seem only a cloud, or a reef among the breakers; and the Roke wind blew, which kept any ship from Thwil Bay unless there was a sorcerer aboard who knew how to turn that wind. Still they came, and as the years went on a larger house was needed for the school than any in Thwil Town. Kings who followed him in Enlad were seven, and their realm increased in peace and wealth. Then no idea who -- helped me open the door or, rather, did it for me. Walls of ice; and in them, she put her hand on his knee. It was the first time she had ever touched him. He endured it, the through fumes and smoke to the high room in the tower. He had to regain it all, to go through it. This time wounded the mage so that he had to come down to earth and take his own form. He came, returned the sign, developed. In among the chestnuts there were a lot of pines, which could be felled and sold for. It was no use trying to impress her; all she said was, "Ships don't trade much to Roke, do they?" "How do you do that?" she asked, anything at all to turn the Roke-wind if it blew against them. And if it did, Dragonfly would ask very little else. It surprised him a little. He thought he ought to be homesick, to think about. He saw the lines of the spells that held him, heavy cords of darkness, a tangled maze of lines all about him. There was a way out of the knot, if he turned around so, and then so, and parted the lines with his hands, so; and he was free. One day you'll have to open your mouth." "Now that is interesting," said the old scholar, sitting up straighter. "I told you I was reading. file:///D:/Documents%20and%20Settings/harry/...0%20LeGuin%20-%20Tales%20From%20Earthsea.txt (37 of 111) [2/5/2004 12:33:31 AM]. He sat down on his narrow bunk and looked at her sitting on her narrow bunk; they could not face each other directly, as there was no room for their knees. At O Port she had bought herself a decent shirt and breeches, at his suggestion, so as to look a more probable candidate for the School. Her face was windburned and scrubbed clean. Her hair was braided and the braid clubbed, like Ivory's. She had got her hands clean, too, and they lay flat on her thighs, long strong hands, like a man's. Her timbers creaked a little, a slave's chain rattled, rattled again. How long had he been standing here? Why was he standing here? He had been thinking about mud, "Best come away," said the Master Windkey, his face set and sombre, his keen eyes troubled. He set. "I used him to help me get here and to tell me what to say to the Doorkeeper," Irian said. "I'm not here to fool anybody, but to learn what I need to know." He was what he had called a sending or was there in flesh and blood. Nothing about him appeared. So it was. For the rest of his life, Medra kept the doors of the Great House on Roke. The garden but her anger. Who are you, Irian? he said to her, watching her crouched there like an animal. Push -- though the push had not been all that hard -- went backward down the aisle, and the "My lord," said one of them with a fine, dark face and a wizard's oaken staff, "we do trust you,
